

FRED'S SANDWICH

By Andrew Perry

FRED'S SANDWICH

by Andrew J. Perry

Written and illustrated by Andrew J. Perry.

Published by Mrs. Perry.

Copyright Andrew J. Perry 1989.

Fred was really hungry. He wanted something to eat like some pickles, or some dips, or vegemite or some chicken or cheese, or even a raw sausage if he could find one.

He thought of ways to eat them all when he got an idea, he could put all of the things he wanted ina sandwich.

So he set to work.

MEANWHILE Fat Frog was setting out on a mission. All the other frogs teased him because he was FAT and fat frog hated it, so he was going to do some thing really, really great so they'd like him. He was going to raid Fred's Kitchen. So he put on his backpack that had all the things he'd need to raid Fred's kitchen and set off. When Fat Frog got to the kitchen window he could smell the most awfull smell. Can you guess what it was?

It was Fred's sandwich.

So far he had put in some pickles, some whipped cream, a raw sausage, some tasty cheese, and some garlic. AND THE GARLIC STUNK. Fred was just putting an egg in when Fat Frog climbed through the window and jumped onto the floor.

But Fred didn't notice. As Fat Frog jumped across the floor to the pantry, Fred was too busy slopping some mayonaise on top of the egg. And Fred didn't notice. Then Fat Frog threw a rope up and hooked it on the top shelf of the pantry.

But Fred didn't notice.

Fat Frog started climbing.

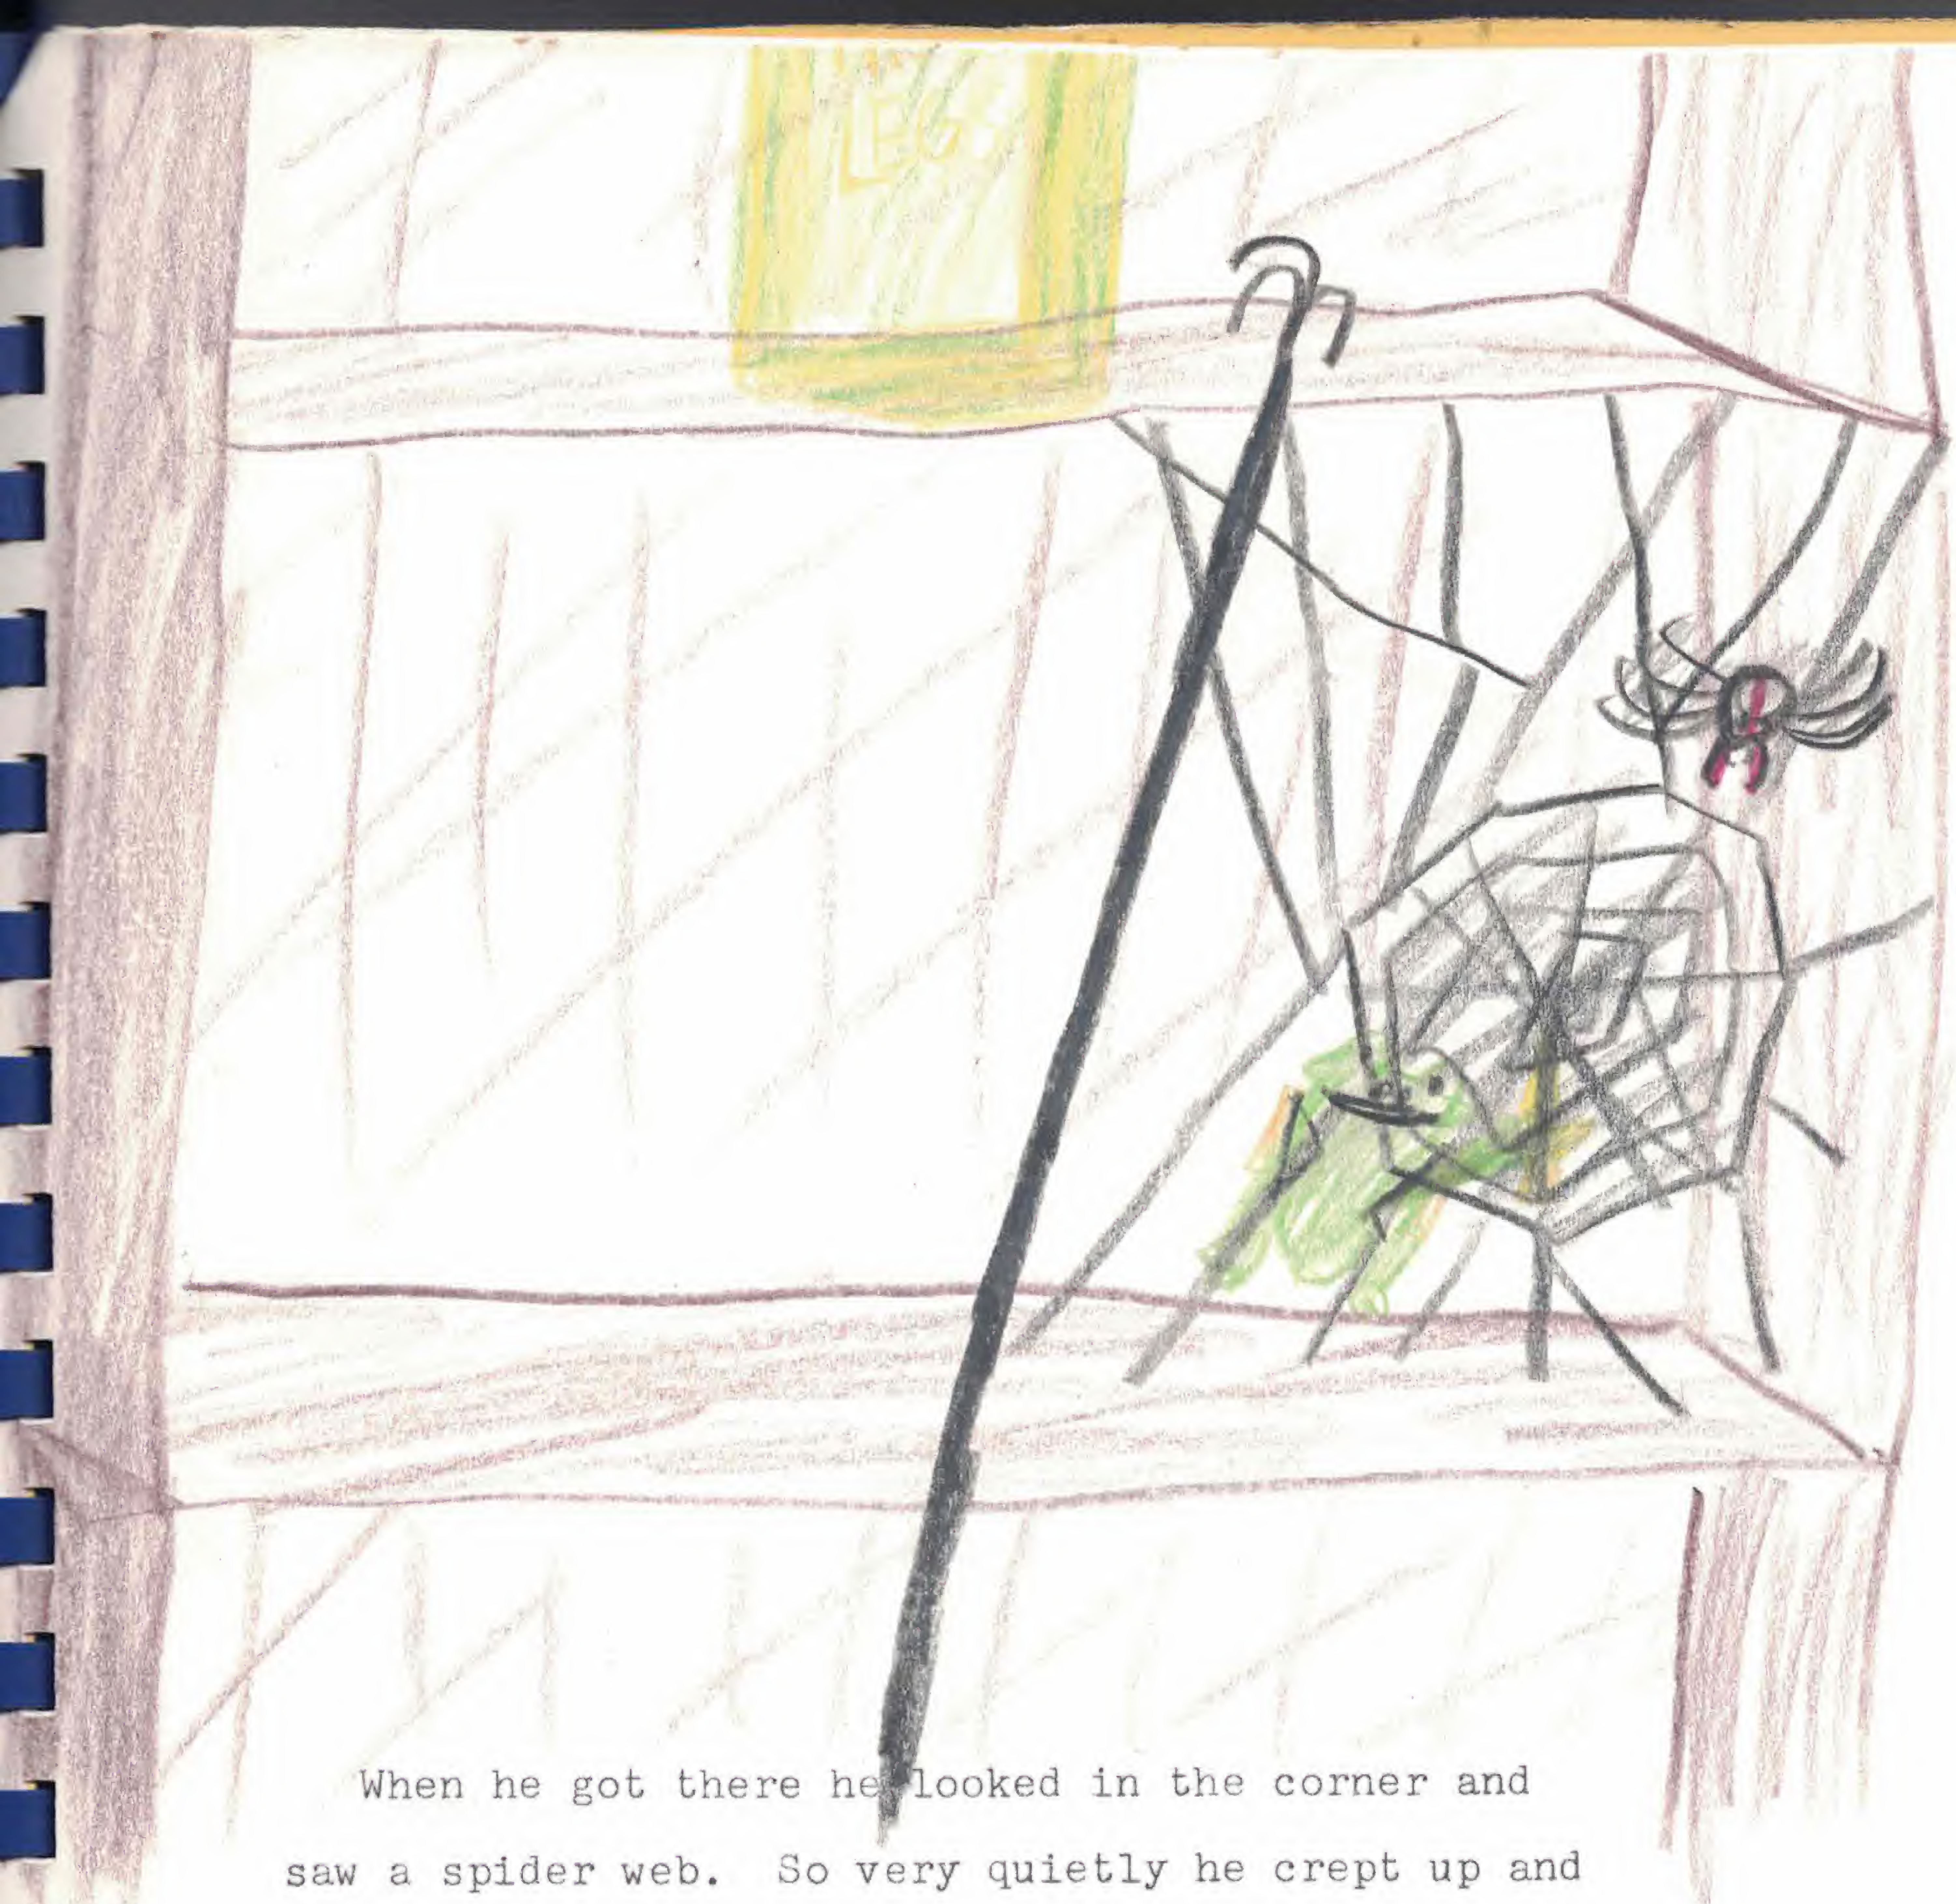

He got to the first shelf but it only had a packet of smarties and a jar of picked onions.

So, Fat Frog climbed to the second shelf. When he looked around he saw Fred's hand about to grab a bottle of plum sauce to put on his sandwich.

So Fat Frog quickly started to climb to the third shelf.

When he got there he looked in the corner and saw a spider web. So very quietly he crept up and then suddenly..... he slipped and fell into the sticky thread.

Quickly Fat Frog grabbed a knife out of his backpack and started to cut at the web. As he started to cut, a big hairy spider popped out. The spider crawled closer along the web. Fat Frog cut faster and harder. Was he going to end up as spider food? Then just as the spider pounced Fat Frog jumped out of the way and climbed to the fourth shelf.

The fourth shelf was the top shelf, it was the highest Fat Frog had ever been. He carefully turned around hoping there were no hungry spiders on this shelf. When he looked behind him he saw a big jar of frogs legs. Terrified Fat Frog turned and ran straight off the shelf and started falling Down,

Down,

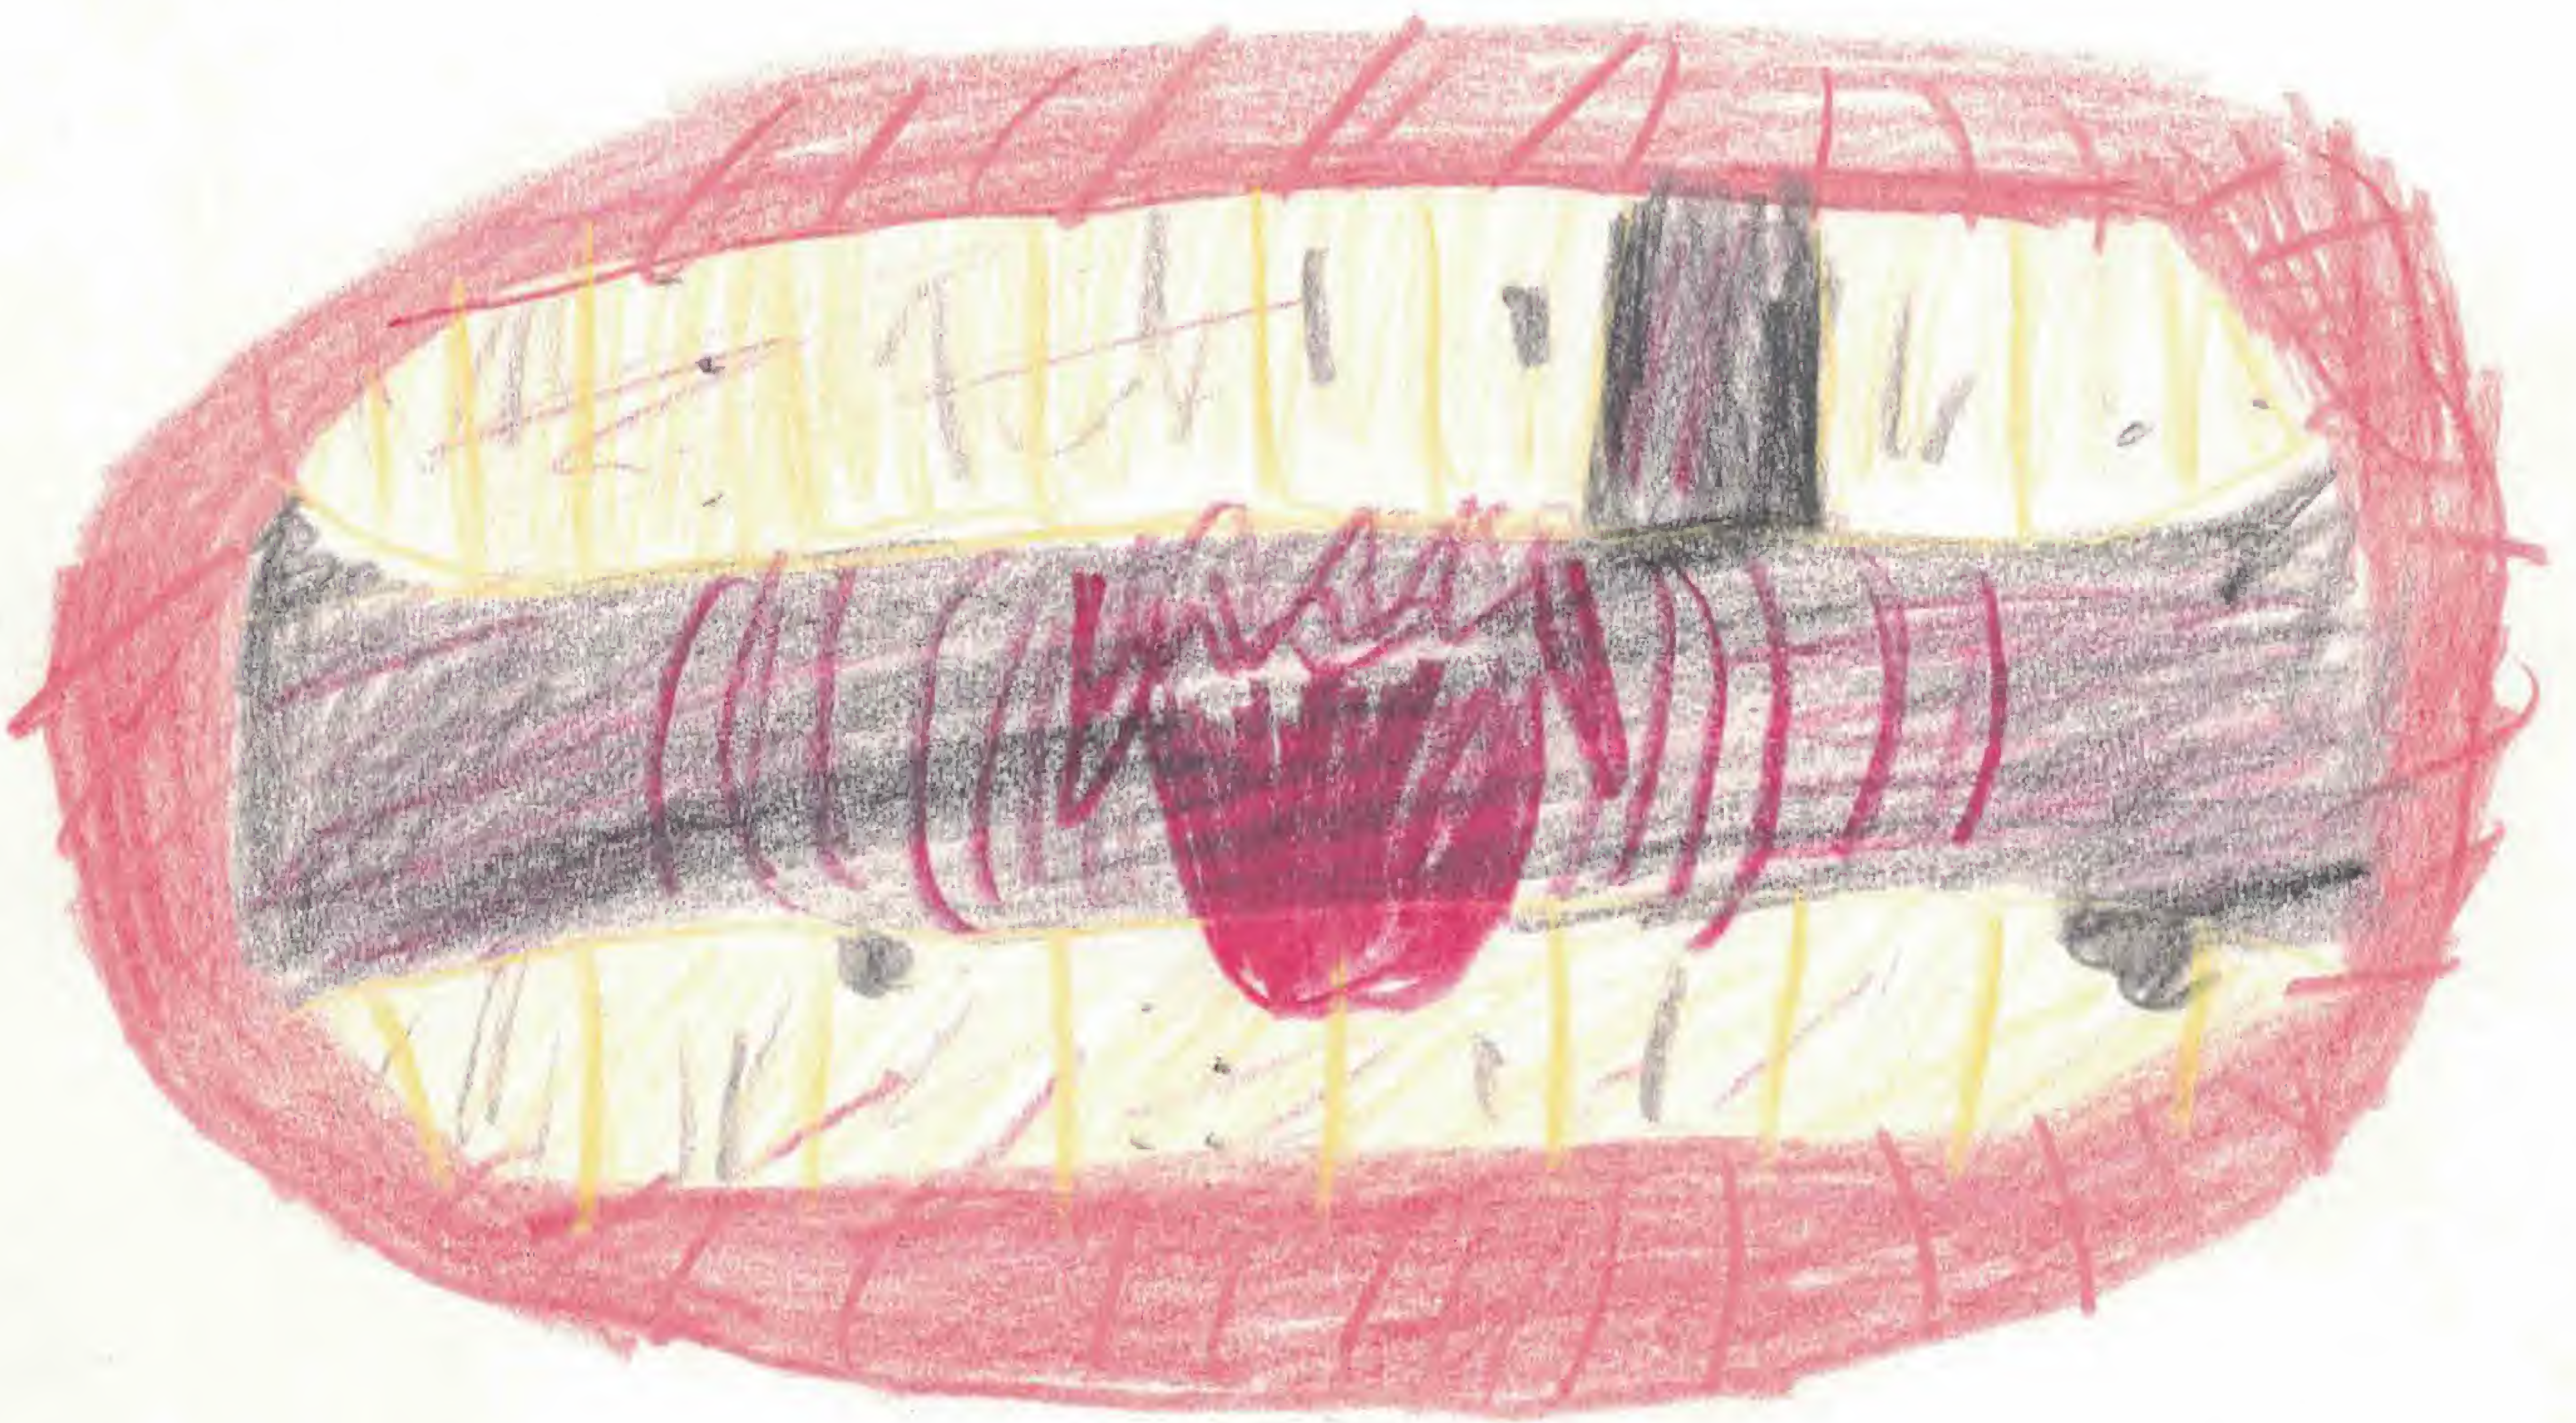

Down,

he landed SPLATT! in Fred's disgusting horrible, putrid sandwich.

Fat Frog was buried under all the muck when Fred put the bread on the top and bit into his horrible sandwich.

Fat Frog saw two sets off giant teeth just miss him and was so scared he jumped out of the sandwich and through the window.

As for Fred, he didn't like his sandwich so he put it on the top shelf of the cupboard next to a spider web. And it STUNK!

Now the hairy spider has to put up with a smelly sandwich all the time. But Fat Frog has made some friends, and he lived FATLY ever after.

